CIVIL SERVANTS ARE 'PUPPETS' OF ABORTION INDUSTRY

Pro-abortion lobby has "privileged access" to heart of government

A recent legal challenge over 'DIY' abortions carried out by women at home has revealed that the Department of Health works hand-in-glove with pro-abortion campaigners.

Christian Concern reports that its request that the High Court would review the government's decision to allow 'at home' abortions has been denied. The organisation was pursuing the case because it believes that DIY abortions, where a woman takes pills to kill her developing baby, are "nowhere near as safe" as abortionists claim.

'At home' abortions had been allowed during the Covid-19 lockdown because the government saw them as a vital part of healthcare, even though many other potentially life-saving consultations had been cancelled.

"If pro-abortion lobbyists want something to happen, they can contact their insiders and get it done"

However, the process has shown how civil servants are puppets of the abortion industry.

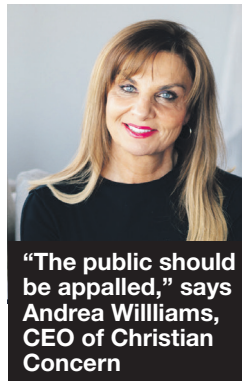

Christian Concern's chief executive Andrea Williams says: "The evidence in the case has begun to expose how the abortion industry has captured the Department of Health. The case has already exposed that if pro-abortion lobbyists want something to happen, they can contact their insiders and get it done."

"One key civil servant in the case worked simultaneously for Public Health England and abortion provider Marie Stopes UK! These aren't clinical experts simply advising on best practice."

They're campaigners like BPAS executive Ann Furedi, who calls for abortion at any stage, for any reason.

"We want to appeal this case, but we need to do much more than that - we need to continue to expose the abortion industry's privileged access to the heart of government and the untold damage caused to women and babies because of their influence."

She added: "The general public should be appalled that the Civil Service has been hijacked by the abortion industry and ministers have become powerless in the face of it."

"The public should be appalled," says Andrea Williams, CEO of Christian Concern

"PARENTS MUST ACT NOW ON SEX ED"

Schools will soon be teaching liberal sex ed classes

The School Gate Campaign is urging parents to lobby their children's school for proper consultation on the new Relationships and Sex Education (RSE) curriculum planned for the autumn term.

Christian mother Susan Mason, who leads the campaign group, says schools might overlook parents' rights on RSE while staff concentrate on their plans to re-open after the lockdown: "It is imperative that parents take the initiative and ask when policy consultation will occur at their school, in preparation for the RSE curriculum being put together."

Topics to be taught in the revised curriculum have shocked Christian and Muslim parents, leading to the daily demonstrations by Muslim parents outside a school in Birmingham.

Ms Mason added: "Even though the law requires that each school consults with parents on RSE policy, and samples of materials should be made available for inspection, the Department for Education is insisting that RSE still has its first lessons in September this year."

Parents concerned at the lack of moral framework in RSE, which will be compulsory even in primary schools, can get guidance at rse-get-it-right.org.uk - a website set up by The Values Foundation advocacy group.

Christians win battle with council over sex ed

A council has dropped its controversial school sex education curriculum after a Christian pressure group intervened.

The Christian Post reports that Warwickshire County Council's RSE course included teaching on masturbation, pornography and transgender ideology, but was withdrawn after parents objected and the Christian Institute threatened legal action.

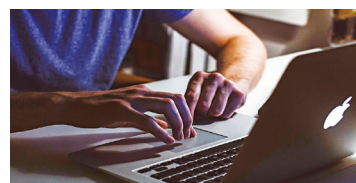

The Christian Institute said the sexually explicit All About Me curriculum "made no reference to marriage, contrary to national requirements", taught that there are multiple genders and encouraged schools to allow students to use toilets of the opposite sex.

All About Me also advised schools not to inform parents if their children shared overnight accommodation with pupils of the opposite sex, and even to conceal a child's transgender status from their own parents - which contravenes the 1998 Human Rights Act, according to the Christian Institute.

A parent also told Birmingham Live that an accompanying website claimed that pornography is fine and there is no such thing as porn addiction.

SOCIAL MEDIA IMPLICATED IN SEX SLAVERY

Facebook

Social media giants have been criticised for allowing prostitution adverts that may encourage sex trafficking.

Escort England, Escort Scotland, Adultwork and Viva Street have run adverts for sexual services on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram, and The Sunday Times alleges that these websites use women who are forced into prostitution.

The three social media giants claim to ban explicit content on their platforms, but anti-trafficking campaigners say prostitution websites get round the restrictions.

Bronagh Andrew of Trafficking Awareness Raising Alliance says: "Women who are trafficked for

'LIST OF JEWS' DEMAND SPARKS OUTRAGE

A top police official in Ukraine has sparked outrage by demanding a 'list of Jews' in the western city of Kolomyia.

The demand for a list of the names, addresses and phone numbers of local Jews was received by Yakov Zalischiker, head of the city's Jewish community, and has been roundly condemned as reminiscent of the Nazi occupation of the former Soviet republic.

DANES PRODUCE A 'NON-JEWISH' BIBLE

A new Danish translation of the New Testament has sparked outrage by omitting the words 'Israel' and 'Jews'.

They have been accused of whitewashing history, identity and sacred Scripture, and even a Muslim cleric has condemned the omissions, saying it was done to present the Jewish people as stateless.

Birgitte Stoklund Larsen, a journalist for the Danish Bible Society, said it was done to avoid identifying ancient Israel with the modern state.

GOD TV UNDER FIRE

A Christian TV station broadcasting in Hebrew is causing controversy over claims it is proselytising Jews.

Even American evangelical leader Laurie Cardoza-Moore has urged Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu to take it off the air.

Host of TV programme 'Focus On Israel', Cardoza-Moore said: "At a time when global anti-Semitism is engulfing the world, GOD TV should be using its platform to teach Christians about their biblical responsibility to stand with our Jewish brethren and the State of Israel."

GOD TV deny the proselytising claims, explaining that Shelanu TV, their Hebrew-language broadcast, features Christian content which happens to portray Jesus as the Jewish Messiah. They have signed a seven-year contract with HOT Cable, the largest cable network in the country, and are working in partnership with Israel's Messianic Jewish community, which means that American 'evangelicals' are seen to be working against the interests of believers in another country!

Unhealthy tweets

The BBC has rejected calls from a pro-Israel group to ban a public health expert from its coverage of the coronavirus pandemic after several of his anti-Semitic tweets were discovered.

Prof John Ashton was alleged to have compared Zionism with Nazism and has also suggested it was "time for Jews to reflect" on the situation in Gaza.

DOUBLE STANDARDS

The founder of the anti-Semitic Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions movement, Omar Barghouti, has said that should Israel invent a vaccine for the coronavirus, he would have no problem cooperating with them if it saved millions of lives.

Labour's would-be Foreign Secretary supports boycott

It seemed Labour's anti-Semitism problem might be receding after new leader Sir Keir Starmer, whose wife is Jewish, spoke boldly of rooting it out.

However, he has appointed Lisa Nandy, one of the other recent leadership contenders, as Shadow Foreign Secretary. Ms Nandy is a former chair of the party's Friends of Palestine group and has recently supported calls for an arms embargo against Israel.

Iranians beg to flee – to Israel!

Iranian journalist, Nada Amin, who received asylum in Israel

Caught between an oppressive regime and the raging coronavirus pandemic, Israel's Foreign Ministry says thousands of Iranians are requesting help to escape to Israel.

"Thousands of people are asking to come to Israel for medical assistance or to emigrate," Yiftah Curiel, head of Digital Diplomacy at the Foreign Ministry, told the Jerusalem Post.

"Sometimes the messages are from people who have been forced to flee and are refugees in other countries, or people who had to flee after expressing solidarity with Israel," Curiel said.

One message from a 31-year-old Iranian told the ministry, "I escaped Iran because of the corrupt regime. I asked for asylum in Turkey, and my wife and 4-year-old daughter and I are in unlivable conditions; there is no one who can help. We have been abandoned and our lives are in danger."

A message from a man claiming to be a Jewish soldier in the Iranian army said being Jewish was a "political and religious crime. I have to flee Iran. Please direct me how to receive asylum in Israel? Please answer me. My life is in danger and I cannot stay in Iran."

The ministry's Persian social media program is run by Sharona Avginsaz, who made aliyah from Iran in 1988. Its Twitter account has 220,000 followers and there are almost half a million on Instagram. The number of requests has overwhelmed the department.

Most Iranians "see Israel as a modern, progressive, democratic country, and that is one of the reasons for this wave of messages to our pages," Avginsaz said, adding that Iranians these days are more aware because of the internet and those who contact her know that Iran's anti-Israel propaganda is a lie.

Prophetic insight into today's world and abounding in love, and he relents from sending calamity" (Joel 2:13).

THE DAY OF THE LORD

Benchmark for judgement

But Joel also foresees a time coming when God will judge all nations – particularly for what they have done to his covenant people of Israel. This will be the benchmark by which the nations are judged, according to Joel.

He says: "In those days and at that time, when I restore the fortunes of Judah and Jerusalem, I will gather all nations and bring them down to the Valley of Jehoshaphat. There I will put them on trial for what they did to my inheritance, my people Israel, because they scattered my people among the nations and divided up my land" (Joel 3:1-2).

If you look at the map where the plague of locusts are centred, it is almost exclusively hitting nations that are hostile to Israel, led by Iran whose leaders have sworn to destroy Israel and are said to be near the point of developing nuclear weapons that could wipe out Israel at a moment's notice.

Tipping point

I believe God is calling for repentance in all nations where the sins of humanity have reached the tipping point that is incurring inevitable judgement. God hates the shedding of innocent blood through the millions of babies that are being aborted.

Millions go to bed hungry every night while others live in luxury

And he hates the greed, violence and injustice that is the spirit driving the world economy whereby millions go to bed hungry every night while others live in luxury. The message I am hearing is that it is only repentance and turning that can stop the plagues from devastating the nations.

But the supreme measure by which God judges the nations is the way they treat Israel, God's covenant people, because that is a measure of their attitude towards God himself. They hate Israel because they hate God; and in some strange way, Israel and Jerusalem symbolise God in the minds of millions of people.

Just as the Nazis blamed the Jews for all their misfortunes, the people in many other nations do the same. The nations persecute Jews because they are in rebellion against God.

Urgent warning

I am not prophesying that we are coming to the great final judgement of the nations. No one knows God's timetable and it is utterly wrong to speculate upon the times that only the Father has in his control.

Only repentance can stop the plagues devastating the nations

But I do believe that God is sending a very urgent warning to humanity that our sinfulness – the sins of all nations – have reached such a point that judgement is coming, and only repentance and turning can save us from destruction. Will the leaders of the nations take heed of the warning signs?

India had asked Iran and Pakistan if they could work together to fight the locust swarms. Iran had been keen, but Pakistan was slower to respond, according to News 18 in May.

The swarms had been forecast to reach South Africa, but one pastor said they had prayed for their country to be spared.
